'The Orpington Outlook'

May 2017 Autumn Edition

Celebrating Mother's Day in Australia

Established in 1985 the Orpington Club of Australia is dedicated to promote and protect this stately breed. 'We do best what we do together'

From the Presidents Shed.

Hello all,

Being rained off today, I actually found some time to sit in front of the computer and write this. Last year's crop of birds are coming along, nothing marvellous in my opinion, still, who knows what they might be like come show day!

Speaking of which, I hope to see as many of you as possible at Harden, having missed the Orp show last year.

The social aspect of our shows is very important, a real feature of our club. So, don't miss it!

I have decided to do a little piece on some of our leading breeders each Outlook, I think it can benefit all of us to get to know them, as well as find out what they do to ensure continued success.

First cab off the rank is our King of Orpington bantams, Bluey Callinan. Bluey writes:

I bred Blue and Black Orpington Large for a few years having reasonable success when at Wellington at the Orpington club show I was smitten by the beauty of the Black Orpington Bantams there to be auctioned. They were all that remained of the fowls from the estate of Mr Jim Wykes; sadly he had passed away. I resisted buying a pair and went home thinking about these little beauties. Orpington bantams were starting to turn heads in shows and I thought that the age of bantams was appearing, so I decided to breed some myself.

I had a very sweet little Blue hen that was too small for exhibition and I needed a male to suit. Graham Findlay gave me a Black cockerel that had profuse feather and a smaller than usual body, so my breeding began. My first chicks were just a bit too big but they were wonderful in type so I kept on breeding to reduce size. I eventually had the size right but the wings were too large and the cockerels crowed like large fowls. I had to add bantam genes. I had an old mate with Australorp bantams and I visited his yard and to my surprise I found a cockerel that was Orpington shaped. I went home with this bird and bred chickens to be happily surprised with all the things I was trying to achieve. I went on, over the next few years to take out Best Bird of Show with Blue and Black bantams.

Rob Lavender was at this time working on Buff Orpington bantams and in his generous style he shared them around with breeders. I was fortunate to get some and started with Buff Bantams. They went well and after a few years I had a major win with them as well.

A major health problem arrived and I made a decision to get rid of my fowls. I sent my Buffs to Melbourne and the Blacks and Whites were re-housed locally. After a year, I was recovering and missing my fowls. My nephew purchased a Buff cockerel bred by Stan Bell in WA as a present for me and I managed to locate a suitable hen, so I was up and running again. I went on to breed Buffs for a few years before deciding to breed Whites. That was a challenge. I have bred Whites for some years now and have them developed to show standard. A major win with the Whites at the Orp Show still evades me but I have been close a few times. I have also started working on a strain of Lavender bantams; that should keep me busy. What is life without a challenge! Bluey Callinan.

What a beaut story Bluey! I know one thing that stands out for me from the foregoing, that is, persistence pays and never give up!

Hope to see you at Harden,
cheers,
Simon

This sketch depicts the first importations of Black Orpingtons into Australia in 1898. It is taken from A.J.Compton's epic work," The Australasian Book Of Poultry". These birds were imported directly from William Cook.

Round the Traps from the Secretary.

Sadly I start my contribution with another piece of sad news. Clive Claus one of the Australian Poultry fancy absolute legends passed away earlier this year. Clive was one of the key amigos who made sure that the Orpingtons bred in Queensland could easily be said as being some of the best in the world.

His Large Blacks, Blue and Buffs won many shows and his bloodlines are infused into pretty much every show winner over many years. Clive was a mentor to many and his sage advice and warm friendship will be sadly missed.

I am pleased to advise that the Orpington Club is supporting Clive's local Poultry Club and the 90th Rosewood Poultry Club Show which is now also a Memorial Show in dedication to Clive's contribution to the Poultry fancy. See the Show advert in this issue for more details-let's hope we get over the 130 Orpingtons on show here again.

This Outlook contains lots of information about our 2017 National Show (Saturday June 24th Harden NSW) with the notice of AGM and show schedule included. We have a great venue and Judge, great support from the local poultry Club and some awesome specials including for the first time some specials from our colleagues across the ditch in New Zealand. We also have a very special trophy donated by Manie van Wyk and the South African Orpington Club which is for the best prepared and presented Orpington in Show. Named after our very own Dallas Smith this perpetual trophy is well worth winning – which every Orpington entered is eligible to do.

You will also see that Club members have taken the initiative to also organise a Northern Orpington Feature (July 9th Uralla NSW) and a Southern Orpington Feature (Oakleigh VIC August 5th). More details to be posted soon via the Clubs face book page (which is now well over 990 members)

That's all for now but as always if you need to ask anything or let me know how your birds are going email, FB message or call me – always happy to chat and spread the word about our favourite Poultry breed!

Cheers for now

BOOK REVIEW

ORPINGTONS – THE PAST, THE PRESENT, THE FUTURE By Dallas J Smith

Dallas Smith is well known for the high standard achieved in the numerous poultry publications he has been associated with, like Simply Wyandottes. The release of Orpingtons will not disappoint. Although written for devotees of this breed, much in the text will interest breeders of other fowl who are struggling with the intricacies of colour.

Orpingtons details the development of the breed and the numerous stakeholders involved. New insights are presented as the author has thoroughly researched the breed's origination. A subsequent section builds on this historical background, examining each colour variety closely and unravelling its particular story and the individuals involved.

One of the valuable features of the book is that it presents a global perspective of Orpingtons with input and photos on the various colour varieties from master breeders from the UK, USA, Denmark, South Africa, Australia and more.

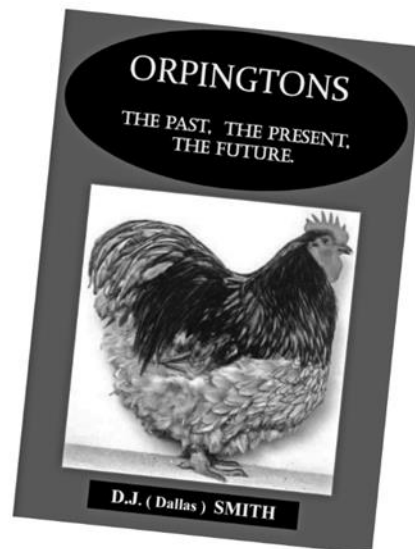

Several parts of the book deserve highlighting. The first is the section titled 'What the Standards do not say'. Several pages are devoted to discussion on points of the standard, enabling a clearer understanding to be achieved. The second section forms part of the colour discussion that accompanies each of the 16 recognised varieties and contains valuable advice on achieving the correct shade or pattern. For example, the examination of both white and blue plumage were valuable as was coverage on some less common Orpington colours.

Separate chapters detailing colour requirements, the breed standards, judging and care and management offer constructive information and advice.

The illustrations in Orpingtons are a key feature with some 200 coloured and black and white photos plus a number of prints. Examining and comparing the photos enables the small differences that exist between examples in different countries to be appreciated and adds to the understanding breeders stand prepared for some great photos of Orpington varieties that are not seen in Australia.

This book is a good investment for collectors and a top read for admirers of the breed that haven't read the antiquarian books by William Cook or Lewis Wright. An excellent mix of history and practical information that will guide breeders to greater success.
